

Recordings

The musical legacy of Kostas Kartelias's poetry continues to grow through recordings that preserve and share its interpretation. Audio performances allow listeners to experience the poems as living works, carried by melody, voice, and musical expression while remaining faithful to the original texts.

This section of the website is intended to develop gradually as additional material becomes available. Future editions will include recordings, albums, live performances, and related documentation that illustrate the rich collaboration between poetry and music. Whenever possible, these resources will be accompanied by contextual notes, performer information, and links to the corresponding poems.

By bringing together written texts and recorded performances, the collection aims to document the continuing artistic life of Kartelias's work. It will serve both as an archive of musical interpretations and as a resource for readers and listeners wishing to explore the enduring relationship between poetry and song.
