

Collaboration

The journey from poem to song is a collaborative artistic process. Once a poem is entrusted to composers and performers, it becomes the meeting point of different creative voices. Each participant contributes unique skills while remaining faithful to the spirit and emotional truth of the original text.

Composers discover musical structures that enhance the poem's rhythm and imagery, while performers give it a living presence through interpretation and expression. Every musical setting is therefore both an act of respect for the poem and an original artistic creation. The success of this collaboration depends on preserving the integrity of the words while allowing music to reveal new emotional nuances.

The songs inspired by the poetry of Kostas Kartelias demonstrate the value of such creative partnerships. Poet, composer, and performer each play a distinct role, together creating works that speak through both language and music, enriching the experience for readers and listeners alike.